Found in Two Hours

On a Saturday morning in Pokhara, Pemba's dog Bhote ran off during a thunderstorm. Pemba searched the lakeside streets until noon, calling his name, but there was no sign of him.

Then her sister had an idea. She posted Bhote's photo in a Facebook group for people living in Pokhara: "Lost: a black dog with a white chest and a red collar. Afraid of thunder. Please call if you see him."

In ten minutes, the post had been shared fifty times. In an hour, a woman wrote that a black dog was hiding under her shop's counter near the bus park, shaking. Pemba ran all the way there. When Bhote heard her voice, he came out wagging his tail so hard that his whole body shook.

That evening, Pemba thanked the group. "Yesterday I thought social media was only for wasting time," she wrote. "Today it brought my best friend home."
